ABSTRACT

This annotated bibliography lists available resources that address many issues involved in population education. Entries are categorized into three parts. Part I, "Population Education," consists of titles on various aspects of population education arranged by country in the first section and by general materials in the second section. Part II, "Knowledge Base Information," contains titles that address the different multidisciplinary aspects of population education. These entries are grouped into sections of major multidisciplinary topics such as Education, Environment, Fertility and Family Planning, Health and Nutrition, Information and Communication, Population Policy and Trends, Socioeconomic Factors and Conditions, and Women. Part III, "Audiovisual Materials," includes titles of various audiovisual aids that address both knowledge base and population education. Each entry is given a running number and bibliographical references that include author, title, imprint, collation, subject and country key words, and classification number. A source code is also given which is the abbreviation of the name of the organization from which a particular title can be acquired. Part IV, "Appendices," contains lists of publishers and sources, subject and author indexes, and a geographical index. (PVD)

INTRODUCTION

This issue of the Population Education Accessions List is an output from our computerized bibliographic data base using the Micro CDS/ISIS system. The Accessions List is being generated three times a year in three formats: printed format, diskette format, and via e-mail. Starting with this issue, the Accessions List can be viewed on our web site: http://www.education.unesco.org/proap/rechpec/welcome.htm

The list categorizes the entries into three parts:

Part I - Population Education consists of titles dealing with various aspects of population education arranged by country in the first section and general materials in the second section.

Part II - Knowledge Base Information consists of titles that deal with the different multidisciplinary aspects of population education. These entries are grouped into sections of the following major multidisciplinary topics:

1. Education (including environmental, functional literacy,family planning, AIDS, and sexuality)
2. Environment
3. Fertility and family planning
4. Health and nutrition
5. Information and communication
6. Population policy and trends
7. Socio-economic factors and conditions
8. Women

Part III - Audio-visual materials consist of titles of various kinds of audio-visual aids (films, slides, charts, kits, videotapes, etc.) dealing with both knowledge base and population education aspects.

Part IV - Appendices consist of List of Publishers and Sources, Subject Index, Author Index, and Geographical Index.

Each entry or title is given a running number and bibliographical references that include: (i) either the author or corporate author; (ii) title; (iii) imprint; (iv) collation; (v) subject key words; (vi) country key words; and (vii) classification number. In addition to these, a source code is also given. The source code is an abbreviation of the name of the organization where a particular title can be acquired. For the complete names and addresses of the source codes, kindly consult the List of Publishers and Sources given in the Appendices.

Wasserman, Pamela, ed.
People and the planet: lessons for a sustainable future. Washington, D.C., Zero Population Growth, Inc., 1996. 189 p.

Through 30 hands-on activities and four readings of this kit for middle school classroom, students explore interconnections of human population growth, natural resource use, solid waste management, biodiversity, social justice, and community well-being. It is divided into four parts. Part 1 (Understanding Population Dynamics) introduces history of world population, how populations grow, exponential growth, demographic profiles of different countries, and the role of individual decision making in determining population growth rates. Part 2 (People, Resources and the Environment) explores the relationship between population and resource consumption trends, and collective impact these trends have on the health of different ecosystems. Topics covered in Part 2 activities include loss of biodiversity; the use of land, water, energy, forests and minerals; cars and their environmental impacts; waste management; and personal environmental ethics. Part 3 (Issues for the Global Family) explores connections between population growth, social justice and people's quality of life worldwide. Issues addressed include distribution of wealth, hunger, gender equity and international migration. Finally, Part 4 (You and Your Community) brings all of these issues back home to the local level. Activities spur discussion on planning for sustainable communities and envisioning a future for people and the planet.

Who will feed China?: wake-up call for a small planet. New York, W.W. Norton, 1995. 163 p. (Worldwatch environmental alert series)

The author overviews the world food situation. He shows that cropland losses are heavy in countries that are densely populated before industrialization, and that these countries quickly become net grain importers as in Japan, South Korea and Taiwan. Exactly the same in China, it may soon have to import so much grain that could trigger unprecedented rises in world food prices. This will force the political leaders everywhere to recognize that the world is now on demographic and economic path that is environmentally unsustainable.

Measuring reproductive morbidity with a sample survey in Peru. New York, Population Council, 1996. 44 p. (Working papers, no. 9)

In this paper, estimates are presented of general morbidity and reproductive morbidity based on the women's reports about diagnoses they received during their visit to a health facility and potential biases that are involved in using this approach are discussed. Information is presented on demographic and socio-economic correlates of health-seeking behaviour and reported conditions of reproductive morbidity. This information is used to correct the estimate of reproductive morbidity. Implications of this analysis for further data collection are discussed in the last section

Husband-wife communication about family planning and contraceptive use in Kenya
International Family Planning Perspectives, v. 23, no. 1, March 1997, p. 15-20

The article focuses on husband-wife communication about family planning and contraceptive use in Kenya. Multiple logistic regression analyses show that husband-wife communication, particularly wife's perception of her husband's approval of family planning, is highly associated with current contraceptive use.

The consequences of unintended fertility for investments in children: conceptual and methodological issues. New York, Population Council, 1996. 28 p. (Population Council. Research Division. Working papers, no. 89)

The paper discusses the limitations of existing data on fertility preferences. The most readily available survey instruments, such as those fielded by Demographic and Health Surveys, are shown to severely constrain angle of vision in assessing potential consequences of unintended childbearing. Finally, some intriguing recent results on consequences are reviewed and practical steps are recommended that could strengthen the empirical base for further research.

Age at first marriage in Viet Nam: patterns and determinants. Asia-Pacific Population Journal 12(2): 49-74, June 1997.

Using data from 1991 Viet Nam Life History Survey, this article examines the patterns and determinants of age at first marriage. It shows that socio-economic and political changes during the last few decades are associated with a shift to older ages of first marriage. It identifies regional variations and discusses the significant impact of warfare on the country's age patterns of marriage. It concludes by bringing out the implications of the study for policy purposes.

The effect of divorce on child survival in a rural area of Bangladesh Population Studies 51(1) 57-61 March 1997

The study examines relationship between parental marriage breakdown and survival of first live-born children in Matlab, a rural area of Bangladesh. The impact of divorce on survival of children during infancy and childhood is examined. Other independent variables included age of mother at birth, mother's education, year of birth, sex of children, and residence at the time of childbirth. The paper also discusses possible mechanisms which link divorce and child survival.

Population pressure and the food supply system in the developing world
Population and Development Review 22(3) 483-503

This study examines trends in food supply system between 1962 and 1989. The focus is on developing world, where current and future agricultural problems are most serious. The analysis is based on Food and Agriculture Organization statistics for different aspects of food supply system in 90 developing countries. Particular attention is given to how developing countries with different population densities have fed their growing populations.

A manual for planning and implementing the living standards measurement study survey. Washington D.C., World Bank, 1996. 290 p. (LSMS working paper, no. 126)

This manual explains planning process, technical procedures, and standards used in Living Standard Measurement Study household surveys. Topics cover technical aspects of questionnaire formatting and testing, ways to implement a sample design, and what fieldwork and data management procedures have been successful. Ideas about directions to pursue in analyzing data are sketched. A brief description of how to assess local statistical capacity is included. Generic work plans and budgets are presented to give ballpark estimates of how long each process will take and what must be included in a budget.
